

Passages - Antigone

We have only a little time to please the living, But all eternity to love the dead.

For mortals greatly to live is greatly to suffer.

Raving ambition helps many a man to good, And many it falsely lures to light desires, Till failure trips them unawares,
and they fall On the fire that consumes
them.

There is no armour against necessity.

Life without life's joys
Is living death;