

Passages - Existentialism is a Humanism

"The sclerosis of objectivity is the annihilation of existence."

Man is nothing else but that which he makes of himself.

You are free, therefore choose- that is to say, invent.

For the decipherment of the sign, however, he bears the entire responsibility. That is what "abandonment" implies, that we ourselves decide our being. And with this abandonment goes anguish.

Quietism is the attitude of people who say, "let others do what I cannot do." The doctrine I am presenting before you is precisely the opposite of this, since it declares that there is no reality except in action. It goes further, indeed, and adds, "Man is nothing else but what he purposes, he exists only in so far as he realises himself, he is therefore nothing else but the sum of his actions, nothing else but what his life is."

In reality and for the existentialist, there is no love apart from the deeds of love; no potentiality of love other than that which is manifested in loving; there is no genius other than that which is expressed in works of art.

A man is no other than a series of undertakings, that he is the sum, the organisation, the set of relations that constitute these undertakings.

Man is all the time outside it is in projecting and losing himself beyond he makes man to exist; and, on the other by pursuing transcendent aims that he himself to exist. Since man is thus self-surpassing, and can only in relation to his self-surpassing, he is the heart and centre of his transcendence.
