

Passages - Klara and the Sun

'Perhaps they hadn't met for a long time. A long, long time.

Perhaps when they last held each other like that, they were still young.'

My second time in the window felt different from the first, and not just because Rosa wasn't with me. The street outside was as lively as before, but I found I had to make more effort to be excited by what I saw.

There was a time, not so long ago, when I thought I was getting to feel less and less. A little less each day. I didn't know if I was happy about that or not.

Its never dull to be with Josie.'

'You waited all that time for me in the store. I bet you're wishing now you'd gone with some other kid'

'I've never wished such a thing. It was my wish to be Josie's AF. And the wish came true.'

'Yeah, but . .! She made a small laughing sound full of sad-ness. 'But that was before you got here. I promised it would be great.'

'I'm very happy here. I have no wish other than to be Josie's AF'

'If I get better, we can go outside together all the time. We could go to the city, see my dad. Maybe he could take us to the other cities.'

'Those are possibilities for the future. But Josie must know.

I couldn't have a better home than this one. Or a better child than Josie. I'm so glad I waited. That Manager allowed me to wait.'

'I think I hate Capaldi because deep down I suspect he may be right. That what he claims is true. That science has now proved beyond doubt there's nothing so unique about my daughter, nothing there our modern tools can't excavate, copy, transfer.

That people have been living with one another all this time, centuries, loving and hating each other, and all on a mistaken premise. A kind of superstition we kept going while we didn't know better. That's how Capaldi sees it, and there's a part of me that fears he's right.

'Mr Capaldi believed there was nothing special inside Josie that couldn't be continued. He told the Mother he'd searched and searched and found nothing like that. But I believe now he was searching in the wrong place. There was something very special, but it wasn't inside Josie. It was inside those who loved her.